What can you do to help?

REHOBOTH JAIL &
PRISON MINISTRY

Every ministry needs finances to prosper!

The reason for this brochure is to help churches, businesses, and individuals understand the benefits of a program for inmates who have been incarcerated for a very long period of time. Men and women are being released from prison into society every day; this program extends the period of time these people will have someone they are accountable to on a daily basis. After being incarcerated for twenty years or more, former inmates are no longer the same persons who were incarcerated years ago, but they are certainly not prepared for what awaits them after being out of touch with the outside so long. They need to acquire new job skills; even if they had a trade before they were incarcerated they would now need to update any requirements associated with their trade.

A preliminary sketch of Restoration House

There are always needs for any program

It is a wonderful blessing when a ministry has the promise of funds to be sure the everyday costs of running a ministry, or that programs in a ministry will be able to continue. There is nothing worse than having a program that has proven itself successful, but cannot continue because of a lack of interest and therefore donations. The question is: what could you, your church, or your business do to help finance a program that could keep these men and women from returning to criminal activities, or more importantly help them to continue to serve the Lord all the rest of their days.

The Restoration House Program consists of:

1. Twelve months of supervised living and accountability for all attitudes and actions other than just those actions that would break the law.
2. Files will be kept of everything the resident accomplishes, positive and negative, to be shared with his or her parole officer when they meet.
3. The resident will pay room and board from the day he or she starts work, hopefully the day after they arrive. This will help the program to eventually become self-supporting.
4. The resident will be expected to support his family when he starts working and it will be a mandatory process for him or her to pay all court costs, fines, and restitutions before he completes the program.
5. The resident and his or her family will receive counseling to restore relationships with family members, budget their income, and improve their job seeking skills.

6. Any special needs of the resident that we can help with will be provided if we can make them available.

This is something you could do.

1. The way to help such a program is to find a way to get involved personally. If you have skills in counseling, teaching, budgeting, or other things that would benefit the house or the residents, volunteer to join up during a time set for your convenience by the staff.

2. We will need someone to actually live on the property to check the men in and out when they go to work and come back, to answer the phones, and to be sure the men are where they are supposed to be.

3. We will need ministers who may want to share a message or Bible study from time to time.

4. Most off all, there will be a need for ongoing finances to keep the program working while the residents' basic needs are being met from the rent they will be paying weekly from their jobs.

All gifts are tax deductible.
